

Language Immersion Leipzig, Germany

June 6 – July 1, 2016

Courses

GER 370-01 Study
Abroad: Intensive German
Language Study (3 credits)
GER 370-02 Study Abroad:
Phonetic Exercises and
Group Project (3 credits)
GER 202 Intermediate
German II (3 credits)

Students are encouraged to work with their Dean's office and academic advisor to ensure how courses taken will count toward their major/minor, etc.

Site Contact

Dr. Arthur Mosher, Prof
Emeritus, Department of Global Languages and Cultures

Apply

Apply online at udayton.edu/edabroad. The application deadline for summer 2016 programs is February 1, 2016.

Located in the State of Saxony in the southern part of former East Germany, Leipzig is a vibrant, culturally rich city of about 500,000. It is home to the University of Leipzig, a prestigious 600-year-old institution with fourteen colleges and 150 institutes. An extensive cultural life is provided by the world-renowned Gewandhaus orchestra, the Leipzig opera, the Central Theatre, the St. Thomas Boys' Choir, the Museum of Modern Art, St. Thomas and St. Nicolas churches, cabarets, and jazz clubs.

Students will intensively study intermediate or advanced German as participants in the international summer course "Languages Build Bridges", sponsored by the InterDaF Language School, a branch of the world-famous Herder Institute at the University of Leipzig. A placement test at the beginning of the period of study will place students into the appropriate level of instruction. Students receive 85 hours of intensive German-language instruction, including phonetic exercises and a directed project. Each student is assigned a native-speaker "tutor" who will guide the student during the stay in Leipzig.

The program includes welcome and departure dinners, a city-tour of Leipzig, attendance at a summer concert or play, visits to museums and historical sites, and one full-day weekend excursion. Other activities are optional at extra cost. Students in good academic standing who have completed GER 201, or the equivalent, are invited to apply.