

Stability of non-unique solutions of differential equations

Muhammad Islam

University of Dayton

Abstract. We consider an initial value problem (I. V. P.) of a first order nonlinear ordinary differential equations. We assume that the I. V. P. can have more than one solution. We study a new type of stability property of these solutions. This stability is not the standard Liapunov stability, commonly studied in the field of differential equations.