THE SOCIAL PRACTICE OF HUMAN RIGHTS:
Charting the Frontiers of Research and Advocacy

An international conference for human rights scholars and practitioners to foster greater self-reflection and constructive critique within the human rights community

UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON
OCTOBER 3-5, 2013
The University of Dayton has been a center of programming, education, research and dialogue on human rights for more than 20 years. Building on this legacy, the University of Dayton is committed to establishing a human rights center, with the distinctive mission of studying human rights advocacy and the structural causes of human rights violations.

Working at the frontiers of research and advocacy and in dialogue with the Catholic social justice tradition, the human rights center will:

- conduct critical research to advance the theory and practice of transformative human rights advocacy;
- promote dialogue and collaboration between human rights researchers and advocates;
- prepare the human rights researchers of the future with the knowledge, skills and values necessary to bring about real change in the lives of the poor and persecuted; and
- provide analytical support to human rights NGOs to strengthen their capacity to respond to emerging threats to human dignity.

Welcome to

THE SOCIAL PRACTICE OF HUMAN RIGHTS: CHARTING THE FRONTIERS OF RESEARCH AND ADVOCACY.

As scholars and practitioners, we are at an auspicious moment to convene, explore the global terrain and inform the future of human rights practice.
