

Information packet for student partners
2017-2018

Welcome!

At the University of Dayton, we educate in the "family spirit." Since 2013, the Center for International Programs has coordinated an intercultural mentorship program, International Friendship Families. The goal is to make our University of Dayton community stronger by connecting current international students with UD faculty, staff, alumni, and local Dayton community members.

Why join? Research shows that friendships within the local community are key for international students who want to develop stronger language skills, greater academic achievement, lower levels of stress and become overall more comfortable with U.S. culture. However, it's often difficult to "break the ice" across cultures. As a member of Friendship Families, you'll get the chance to feel "at home" in Dayton with a local family or individual. On top of this, it is a great chance to teach your Friendship Family your own culture and traditions.

How does it work? At our Kick-off Party, you will be matched with a UD faculty member, staff person, or local community member for a semester-long partnership. After this first meeting, you and your Friendship Family are simply expected to get together at least once a month for activities that you both enjoy - from sharing conversations around the dinner table and celebrating holidays, to participating in campus and community events. To get you started, we provide a menu of suggested activities (see below) as well as a few scheduled meetups to help keep everyone in touch.

At the end of each semester, we will invite all IFF participants to a Closing Celebration where we share photos and stories from our experiences, and recognize everyone's commitment through a short ceremony. After this, you and your family are free to continue meeting if both sides are interested in a longer relationship, but that is not considered part of the IFF program.

Thank you for being a part of this important mission! We appreciate that you are willing to begin this new adventure and share your culture with the Dayton community!

PROGRAM BASICS

Please ✓ to confirm that you understand and agree:

- IFF is a voluntary program. It is organized by the University of Dayton's International Student & Scholar Services (ISSS) Office. The program's primary purpose is to promote cultural exchange between international students and local community members.
- IFF is not a host family program. Families are not expected to host students. This program is designed to provide the student and the family with flexibility and space in their relationship.
- IFF is not without risks. It is natural that in a cross-cultural interaction, some personality conflicts or cultural differences may happen. We expect you to communicate openly and respectfully with your Friendship Family in order to resolve these conflicts. If needed, the ISSS Office can help mediate conflicts.
- ISSS matches students with families based on each party's preferences. Depending on the number of participants each semester, we may not be able to meet all requests. We will do our best to support all students and Friendship Families to make meaningful connections.
