

CALLINGS 2014

Program Rules and Agreement

The University of Dayton is a residential academic community. The residential character of campus life at UD provides students with the opportunity to develop intellectually and socially, to examine their commitment to religious faith, to clarify and strengthen their moral beliefs and their personal values and to experience the bond of community. We expect that participants in the Callings program will be enthusiastic and responsible. We do not expect to experience discipline problems, but if we do, a Callings staff member will handle them immediately.

By registering for the CALLINGS program, you and your parents/guardians agree to support these program rules:

1. Participants must stay on the University campus at all times during the session. Transportation is provided to all program functions away from the main campus. Participants are NOT allowed to leave the residence hall at night.
2. Participants will tour neighborhoods and partner social service agencies and participate in an off-campus service and community engagement. Community members view Callings participants as representatives of the University. All participants are expected to dress and behave appropriately.
3. Participants will not be permitted to have guests on campus during the program.
4. Buildings at University of Dayton are smoke-free. Smoking is permitted in designated smoking areas.
5. The use of intoxicants, including drugs and alcohol, is prohibited.
