47 WOODLAND AVENUE

Ethan Porter, Kevin Maguire, Casey Smith, Patrick Reed and Ried Fuente

Community is Essential for Learning. Integrate learning and living.

As a special interest group we are already predisposed to the concept of living and learning. Our special interest of sustainable living allows us to share what we grow with the community. We believe that we can greater enhance our learning experience through interaction and cooperation with others in our community.

706 ALBERTA STREET

Delaine Oda, Laura Condon, Tori Borchers and Caroline Boeckman

Community is Essential for Learning. Develop your faith life.

Our commitment to community is that we will inspire all members to support each other in developing their faith life. We will strive to be accepting of all different faiths by encouraging the practices of religion. It is essential for community members to learn about faith in order to develop it, so we will help facilitate faith education in our community.

1306 BROWN STREET, APT. B

Allison Ecker, Elizabeth Keating, Shelby Schaffner, Shannon Myers and Theresa Stiffar

Community is Essential for Learning. Integrate learning and living.

As a house with engineering, business, and international studies majors, we are able to help each other "step back" from our assignments and evaluate them from a different perspective. Having the differing educational backgrounds, each house member is able to experience and hopefully respect other groups on campus. We not only commit to helping each other in this endeavor, but all those in our community.

52 WOODLAND AVENUE

Anthony Reiling, Garrett Wolking, Austin McKenzie, Thomas Kendo and Jonathon P. Sens

The Common Good. Treat others with respect.

Embracing diversity in order to gain a greater understanding of other cultures. Respecting others opinions and viewpoints even when different from our own. Encouraging others within the community to also uphold these principles of acceptance.

1524 BROWN STREET

Anjali Haury, Aubrey Steele, Laura Donohue, Bev Dines and Reine-Marie Hammonds

The Dignity of Every Person. Treat others with respect.

Theta Phi is committed to respecting the individuality and uniqueness of everyone. We strive to implement what we learn through service and student involvement in how we live and treat others. Theta Phi is committed to strengthening relationships and creating bonds with both members and nonmembers in order to form a more cohesive community.

WE'RE ALL ABOUT COMMUNITY. BUT SOMETIMES WE SINGLE OUT A FEW.

Among our favorite activities are the opportunities to recognize and applaud students who help make the University of Dayton such a special place.

We look forward to these moments when we can put the spotlight on contributions students make. These award winners take steps to help us enhance the Catholic and Marianist characteristics that set the University of Dayton apart.

The Catholic and Marianist vision of education makes the University of Dayton community unique. It shapes the "warmth of welcome"¹ we first experience when we arrive on campus and the family spirit we treasure long after graduation. It calls us to academic rigor integrated with faith and life. It challenges each of us to take up the hard work necessary to build the intellectual, spiritual, religious, moral, physical and social dimensions of our educational community.²

31 ROGGE STREET

Matthew Leff, Tyler Pronty, Daniel Donnell and Jeffery Burgei

The Dignity of Every Person. Treat others with respect.

As a house and members of the UD community, we strive to connect with and accept all our fellow students and citizens of the greater Dayton area. We truly believe in the inherent worth of all people. Starting with our house, we understand that the best way to improve ourselves is by opening up to and learning from everyone around us.

220 L STREET

Genevieve Kocoloski, Mackenzie Wilson, Melissa Siegel, Mara Cooperrider and Shayna Niese

The Dignity of Every Person. Take responsibility for self and community.

In order to commit to our community, we believe in looking out for not only ourselves, but for others. We strive to preserve the dignity of every person and realize that accountability is a key factor in living in a community. We can achieve our goals by taking responsibility for our community and all those living in it.

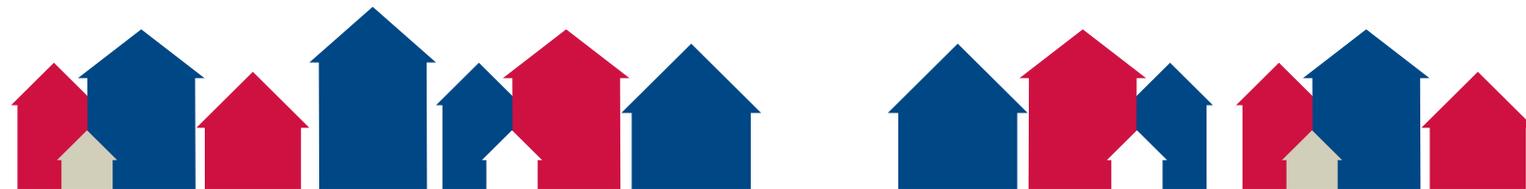

408 STONEMILL ROAD

Kelsie Neal, Chelsea Randall, Courtney Potter, Hannah Hughes and Georgette Harrold

The Common Good. Take responsibility for self and community.

By taking responsibility for oneself and one's community, the student neighborhood would be a better place. Taking responsibility one person at a time can essentially work toward a better common good. Kappa Delta instills in each woman the importance of responsibility within the community and the importance of responsibility starting with yourself.
